WHERE YOU'RE GOING

The Dominican Republic is a country where baseball players are made. Home to Fernando Tatis Jr, Robinson Cano, Juan Soto, Sammy Sosa, Vladimir Guerrero Jr, Pedro Martinez and hundreds of major leaguers.

You will be playing against local kids who are competing to get to MLB. These kids are in baseball academies and local teams. All kids have birth certificates and are in the age of the teams they are playing. Baseball camps in the Punta Cana area are full and competition is very good.

FAQ

Is travelling to the DR safe?

Yes! The Dominican Republic is a democratic nation with a stable government and a growing infrastructure which has lead to a booming tourism industry due to traveler safety and the island's natural beauty.

What documents are needed to travel to the DR?

All players need a valid passport to travel to the Dominican Republic. Additionally, Punta Cana Sports requires each player to have a signed and notarized "Consent to Travel Abroad" form giving them permission to travel outside of the USA with their coaches/chaperones. Upon entering customs in the Dominican Republic, players have to purchase a $10 tourist visa.

What baseball gear should I bring?

- Glove
- Protective equipment
- White baseball pants
- Black baseball socks
- Personal items
- Plastic cleats (metal cleats are allowed but not recommended)
- Your own bat (please be aware of TSA security and airline baggage policies regarding travel with any bats)

What is the weather like in the DR?

The so-called 'cool' or winter season, runs from November to April. The humidity is relatively low during these months and it tends to cool down in the evenings much more than in the summer months. The coastal/beach regions generally experience highs of around 28°C (83°F) during the day and lows of about 20°C (68°F) in the evening.

The summer season in the Dominican Republic runs from May to October. Average daily highs for the coastal/beach regions rise to around 31°C (87°F) during the day, dropping down to about 22°C (72°F) at night. It is the higher humidity during this period that can make it feel much hotter during this season.
